Yesterday the same Sun reporter who first wisited the asylum when it was opened in Octo-ber, 1869, in East Twelfth street, called at the

at 3 Washington square, north, and obtained from the Sister Superior in charge the following statement : The asylum was opened Oct. 12, 1869. Since that day over 3.000 children have been found at the door or in the basket. Of these, 1,300 are still living and in the asylum or out at nurse. It must not be supposed that all of the 1,700 remainder of the 3,000 have died. Many have, for reasons best known to the Sisters, been returned to the parents, but when they have been returned it was generally in case of the marriage of the father and mother. The number that have died is small compared with the statistics of European foundling asylums. The number of living children is, in reality, large, when the fact is taken in consideration that many of the children are left in a dying or fearfully diseased condition; and many are brought in with the marks of violence on their little bodies, showing that they have been probably rescued by force or stratagem from a violent death.

From a violent death.

WHERE THE MONEY COMES FROM.

The expense of taking care of and supporting this number of children is enormous. There are twelve Sisters of Charity in the house and sixty nurses, beside 1,000 nurses outside; for most of the children are put out to nurse, the house in Washington square accommodating only about 150. Those outside nurses are under the incessant survoillance and superintendence, by visiting, of the Sisters and certain ladles, members of the Foundling Ald Association. It costs $11,000 per month to pay these nurses, purchase provisions, food, and clothing for the children, and pay the house rent. That, at least, is the present rate of expenditure. Where the money comes from is a puzzle. The city pays to the asylum about $1.50 per week for each child. It takes no labored arithmetical calculation or mathematical problem to see that $2.500 extra must be raised every month. The Ladles Foundling Ald Society and donations from various sources supply this balance, for as yet there is no fund especially belonging to the institution. It is true that the Legislature has given a square of ground in the upper part of the city, valued at $100,000, on which the building of the new asylum are being erected; and besides have appropriated $100,000 more for that purpose. But that is the building fund, and the suppert of the institution must be drawn from other sources.

The current expenses of the house for the first year amounted to $44,848.85. The second year to $67,788.39, and the third year to over $100,000. All this money is supplied in the manner above mentioned.

THE NEW FOUNDLING ASYLUM BUILDINGS in course of erection are located on the square WHERE THE MONEY COMES FROM.

THE NEW FOUNDLING ASYLUM BUILDINGS THE NEW FOUNDLING ASYLUM BUILDINGS in course of erection are located on the square lying between Sixty-eighth and Sixty-ninth etreets, and Lexington and Third avenues. The main and central building, and four others, front on Sixty-eighth street. They are all of immense size. The central one has a façade of 90 feet, and extends 60 feet back into the square. The other four, 40 feet apart, to give free circulation of air between them, extend from street to street. The central building is five stories high, with a Mansard roof and beli tower. Under its bandsome portal

THE TOURN CRECHE, OR TURNING CRADLE,

THE TOURN CRECHE, OR TURNING CRADLE,
for the reception of infants, is constructed. In it the foundling is to be placed, and a bell pull at the side to be rung. As soon as the bell sounds the cradle turns, and the child and its mother are separated forever unless she can identify and claim it in after years.
Back of the main building there will, in course of time, be a chapel. One other building, a lawndry and quarantine, is also to be bailt. This will make seven buildings in all on the premises, and ample room for play grounds. The proximity to Central Park will afford another ample place of recreation for the children and nurses.
When completed it will be an institution of which New York may well be proud.

THE REPORTER'S STORY. THE REPORTER'S STORY.

THE REPORTER'S STORY.

On a dark and gloomy afternnon in October, three years ago, the Sun reporter, who called yesterday at the asylum, first visited the house in Twelth street, then just occupied by the Sisters, but not yet opened for the reception of infants. There was no basket in the vestibule, and is little girl with a brown, curly head and blue eyes admitted the visitor. She was a little, wee eyes admitted the visitor. She was a little, wee thing, with a serious, motherly air. She is now a large girl of thirteen or fourteen, and is still the portress of the asylum.

She looks still more serious, but calm and happy, and strangely thoughiful for one so young. That little girl has seen more babies, perhaps, in three years, than any other little girl in New York. The Sister in charge had at that time only four Sisters in the house, and one little baby. She brought the little founding in the parlor for the reporter to see, and seemed very happy in anticipation of the work before her. No associations for their aid had then been formed. The only means provided for the support of the children was supplied by the Sisters of Charity from their funds under the control of the Mother House at Mt. St. Vincent's.ton the Hudson. A few weeks after this the reporter called again. There were about twenty babies in the house, and a Foundling Aid Society had been organized.

The Foundling Aid Society had been organized. The Foundling Aid Society.

Its members were ladies of the most fashionable, elegant, and aristocratic circles of our metropolitan society. Mrs. Paul Thebaud was elected the President of this body, and Mrs. Terence Donnelly, Vice-President. The efforts of these two ladies in their respective positions are beyond all praise. No inclemency of weather, no flaggling interest on the part of others, ever keep them from the asylum on the regular weekly meeting days, and there is serious work for all who attend these meetings. On these sladies and their associates devolves the work of cutting out and making the clothing for 1,300 or more bables, besides devising the ways and means to purchase the materials for the garments, the shoes, stockings, and all the various wants of babyhood. And the little ones are well, comfortably, and prettily clothed. The entire burden of the support and management of the fiscal affairs of the establishment devolves on them. Constituting an advisory and assisting council for the Sister Superior, they with her receive and disburse all the money that is necessary for house rent, nurse hire, food, and clething for all the various inmates and attaches of this expensive establishment.

A VISIT TO THE INSTITUTION. THE FOUNDLING AID SOCIETY.

A VISIT TO THE INSTITUTION.

Some of the ladies were present when the reporter made the second visit, and it was evident that the tide of fashionable benevolence was destined to take the direction of the Foundling Asylum. On the door was a plate on which was inscribed "Foundling Asylum," and in the hall tellitle white box on a tall pedestal, on which hall black letters was written, "Foundling Asylum Bank. One hundred per cent, interest, payable in Heaven." A little slip in the top of the box sinvited the deposit of pennies, dimes, or dolars. On this occasion, while the reporter was awaiting the opening of the door, two girls with babies in their arms entered the vestibule. Their faces were marred with the traces of recent tears, and they had evidently come to leave their babies as foundlings in the basket of the asylum. The reporter and visitors made way for them, and then a most touching scene transpired. The poor young creatures would put their babies in the basket crib which had been oplaced in the vestibule side by side, and then their babies in the basket crib which had been oplaced in the vestibule side by side, and then bitterly, cried, in a voice choking with grief:

"Ohl my baby! How can I give you up?"
She clasped the little creature to her bosom, and started off with it in her arms. Soon she returned, however, and putting the baby in the basket, rang the bell. The portress opened the door. But the poor mother selzed the child and started off again, but only to return and repeat the trying scene. This was continued until every Sister, visitor, and nurse in the house was attracted to the hall, and stood weeping in sympathy with the poor mother. Finally the child was left. These were two poor girls. They may have been married women; for virtuous poverty in this great city is frequently obliged to abandon the support of its children to this and other institutions. Abject, wretched, diseased vice brings its miserable offspring here also; but not these alone.

The costly attire frequently seen upon a newly-arrived baby that came in the night before, at midnight's murky hour, tells the story of where it came from. Its dainty limbs and rich laces and embroideries look strange amid the neat and pretty dresses of its companions. Such babies frequently have a fancy name, such as "Our little Alie," or "Fannie," or "Charlie," or "Harry," written on a card and attached to their dresses. Sometimes a costly earring of curious workmanship will be suspended to the child's neck, and a note pinned upon the dress requesting that the "trinket may be preserved," and when the match is presented in after years they will permit the child to be restored to its presched mother." The fashionable and favorite charity of New York is unquestionably the Foundling Asylum of the Sisters of Charity. It is one which has enjoyed the most unbounded popularity among all classes of society from its commencement, and one which has exerted a deeper and more extended influence upon the tone of our city than any other. It has taken the reproach of infanticide almost entirely away from our population, rescuing from a cruel death by murder, at the hand of a parent, or through the instrumentality of a baby farmer, over 3,000 thelpless children within the last three years.

who are our sisters of charity?

Every New Yorker, from the time he is nine years old, knows, or thinks he knows, who the Sisters of Charity are. He sees them everywhere along the streets, in their long black bonnets, and plain black habits, and long shawls; and he knows they are visiting the sick or the prisoners at the Tombs, or on the Island, or the patients at the hospitals, or going to their daily labors in the numerous free parochial schools attached to every Roman Catholic church in the city. They seem to be everywhere, on every street from the Battery to the Park, and from the North to the East river. They are as ubiquitous as Sun reporters, or policemen, or beggars, or bootblacks, or newsboys. There is a look of thorough discipline about each one of them, which gives a certain high bred charm to their manner and appearance. But more than that, on the chastened, luminous face of each sister is plainly written. "This is a woman who works, watches, and prays, and enjoys it."

They are disciplined—as disciplined as a regiment of soldiers. At WHO ARE OUR SISTERS OF CHARITY?

They are disciplined—as disciplined as a regiment of soldiers. At

Mt. St. VINCENT'S

on the Hudson, just below Yonkers, is their Mother House, where their novices are received and trained for the work they are to do in the world. Here the postulants must spend at least six months of their two-year novitiate, learning the habits of self-abnegation necessary for a sister; for their's is not an easy life. They must be trained to rise at 4 o'clock every morning and retire at 8 in the evening; to assist at mass every morning before breakfasting; to be employed every hour in the day as directed by their rules, either in work, prayers, contemplation, study or recreation, for when the recreation hour comes they must recreate. Every New Yorker does not know all this, nor does he know that there are over five hundred of these sisters belonging to this Mother House alone, and that they have over sixty charitable, educational, and industrial institutions under their charge, dotting the whole city of New York, and extending into Brooklym Jersey City, Providence, and New Haven, all branch houses or missions of Mt. St. Vincent's These institutions consist of orphan asylums hospitals, homes for the aged and homes for destitute children and young women, boarding schools for girls and boarding schools for girls and boarding schools for girls and boarding schools for box, and free schools for both boys and girls, beside the great koman Catholic protectories in West chester county, and the New York Foundling. useful association of religious and charitable women were first organized in this country by

A NEW ENGLAND LADY, and a convert to the Roman Catholic Church, In 1805, in old St. Peter's Church, in Harclay street, Mrs. Catherine Seton, a widow, the mother of several children, and a lady who has been distinguished for her remarkable plety as a Protestant, presented herself before the altar to be received into the bosom of the Church. She had not at that time the remotest idea of founding a religious order; but in less than four years the religious element in her character, which had always been marked from childhood, found its development in that direction, overcoming all obstacles in the way of family ties and social influences. She attracted other ladies to her, and together they became the founders of the first new order of the Church for women on the American continent. One of her daughters is now an ex-Superior in a convent of the Sisters of Mercy in this city, while one of her sons is a priest exercising the duties of the Papal Nuncio in this arch-diocese and the diocese of Newark, New Jersey. Her spiritual daughters, the Sisters of Charity, are scattered all over this great Republic.

THE DOMAIN OF THE SISTERS.

Mt. St. Vincent's is one of the most beautified of all the beautiful localities on the Hudson. Sixty acres of ground, parks, lawns, and terraced gardens surround the magnificent buildings. The convent and academy, in one building, 380 feet in length, crowns one of the many broad terraces into which the Mount is cut by the landscape gardener. In the centre is a lofty belt tour, from whose giddy height magnificent views are to be had of all the surrounding cities. New York included, and an immense tract of country up and down the Hudson.

FONT HILL CASTLE,

the creation and one time home of Edwin Forrest, the tragedian, flanks the convent on the north occupying a terrace just below that building. Forrest sold his beautiful home to the Sisters at a very low price, and made them frequent visits till the time of his death. The castle adds much to the picturesque beauty of the domain, but since the erection of their convent it is unoccupied by the Sisters. In it are apartments for the Archbishop, whenever he makes a semi-annual visit to the Mount. The chaplain, physician, and necessary servants for such an immense establishment also have rooms in the building. In the top of the loftiest tower of the castle is a little chamber roached by a narrow, winding stone staircase. Here during the day sleeps the night watchman, who guards the whole premises through the night.

The grounds around the castle and convent are always in the highest state of cultivation, and rare plants and flowers adorn those parteres and terraces whose artistic beauty was created by the hand of some master artist landscape gardener. In the months of May and June, when the school is in session, and the three hundred pupils are seen sporting among those ravines and terraces blooming with roses and hydrangens, lilacs and geraniums, and other exotics bedded in the soft, velvet turf, with cloud-shadows flying over the whole domain, river, park, ga

With Forging Share Certificates to the Value of £22,000.

From the London Times, Jan. 8.

Yesterday afternoon the Rev. V. H. Moyle, Vicar of Eston, was brought up at the Town hall, Middlesbrough, on a charge of forging shares certificates of Jackson. Gill & Co., (limited), representing £2,000. The Bonch proceeded to hear witnesses. Inspector Robson of the North Ridding Constabulary said that on Monday afternoon last, while in the town cierk's office at Middlesbrough, Mr. Moyle was present in custody upon charges of forgery. Mr. Moyle then said that the charges of forgery mr. Moyle then said that the charges of forgery mr. Moyle then said that the charges of forgery by Mr. Clarke Dixon world. The prisoner was remanded till yosterday. On the journey from Middlesbrough to Northallerton Mr. Moyle several times repeated the expressions. At the time he had been charged with forgery by Mr. Clarke Dixon he was charged for forging at the township of Normanby certain shares, numbered 131 to 350 inclusive, purporting to be 100 fully paid shares in Jackson. Gill & Co. He was also charged with forging the signatures of William and Thomas Gill, two directors, also with forging the signature of Edwin F. White, Secretary of the company. Mr. William Gill, one of the directors there, declared on oath that the signatures to the shares were forged, but this evidence was not taken down. Sergt. McPherson, who apprehended the prisoner at Normanby House. Eston, on the 30th of December, corroborated the evidence of the previous witness. When apprehended, the prisoner and, "Oh, where are you going to take me?" He frequently repeated the words, "I am guilty, God knows." On the way to Northallerton Jail he also said, "I wish I had never left North Ormesby. I don't know what made me do it." This having been taken down in writing, the magistate's clerk asked if any other evidence was forthcoming. No answer was given. Mr. Belk, Town Clerk of Middlesbrough, said that he represented Jackson, Gill & Co., but, as the present evidence was not rem

Cleveland Bookhawking Society, all aprang into existence chiefly by his efforts; while at North Ormesby he largely increased the utility of the Cottage Hospital, and he also raised funds for erecting the church. In 1899, after having refused numerous offers of preferment, he, at the express request of the Archbishop of York, took charge of the new parish of Eston, which has a population of 3,009, and an income of $290 per annum for the vicar.

Another of the Unfathomable Mysteries of the Human Brain.

SCRANTON, Jan. 28.—Mr. R. A. Hall, of the book and stationery store of Hall & Pratt of this city, was seized with violent spasms on Tuesday night of last week, and on his regaining consciousness the next morning it was found that his recollection of events since the summer of 1870 up to the night he was taken sick was entirely gone. He did not know he was living in Scranton, and could scarcely be made believe he had been in business here for over two years. He removed here from Elmira. Every person with whom he has formed an acquintance here since that time is unknown by him now. He recognized his wife and every one, he formed an acquintance here since that time is unknown by him now. He recognized his wife and every one he knew previous to the summer of 1870. His partner, Mr. Pratt, he remembers only as the principal of the Danville Academy, which position the latter held previous to going in partnership with Hall. He relates trivial incidents occurring three years ago, which have long been forgotten by every one else. He does not know the clerks who have been in his employ for two years, and the other day entered his store for the first time to his recollection. Briefly, three years of his life have been wiped out.

The date of the last thing Mr. Hall remembers auggests the solution of this problem. In the summer of 1870, while getting hay for a horse in his barn at Elmira, Mr. Hall fell in some way, striking his head against a heavy timber. It rendered him inaccastic for some time, but there was never any serious result up to the hour of his prostration by sickness last week.
